Total Construction Should Set New Records in 1957

Chicago—Construction will continue at a record pace this year, although there will be little change in the volume of residential building.

This is the opinion of John M. Neff, manager of the ceramics and minerals research department at Armour Research Foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago.

He believes total construction will set a record in 1957, as it did last year, but that private home construction—which failed to live up to expectations last year—will not do much better in 1957.

"This latter point does not reflect a recession in the building industry as some people seem to think," Neff declared. "The building industry is holding its own in our growing economy, but not in the areas that were expected."

The volume of all types of construction last year totaled over $44 billion, an increase of 3 per cent over 1955. Residential construction in 1956, however, was down 8 per cent from the previous year.

This does not indicate that the supply of housing is catching up to demand, Neff contended. But it does reflect, he said, a more cautious attitude on the part of people who are house hunting.

"The public is standing off and giving more consideration to how they want to live 20 years from now," Neff declared. It is largely this thoughtful pause in making a decision, he said, that is responsible for the slowdown in private home construction.

Human Body Reacts To Hunger, Pain

Los Angeles—What happens to your body when you are hungry or hurt?

Dr. Bernard Engel, University of California, Los Angeles, psychologist, has made a study of such "abnormal" conditions.

Subjects who fasted up to 24 hours showed a slight drop in blood pressure, a very slight rise in temperature, increased saliva flow, decreased respiration rate, and an increased incidence of stomach contractions.

Subjects who had their feet suddenly plunged into a bucket of ice water showed a marked increase in blood pressure and an increased heart rate. The blood volume in their fingers also dropped, and a blocking of stomach contractions occurred. Anticipation of pain produced similar but not identical results.

In general, Dr. Engel said, the studies did not support earlier theories which had suggested that the body did not physiologically distinguish between hunger and pain.

Official Asks for— Gets Speedy Service

NEW YORK — One of New York's outstanding optical firms recently had an urgent call from the State Department in Washington. A prominent member of the Department had had his bifocals swept into the Carribbean Sea by a wave while he was struggling with a big fish. The request was that a new pair of glasses be made and shipped by an afternoon plane that same day.

It was 11:30 a.m. when the call came. The manager of the optical firm, who had served this official for 25 years, knew his prescription was a complicated one. Nevertheless, he immediately asked a master technician to drop everything else and grind lenses. The grinding was done with unusual speed, the manager himself set the lens in a suitable frame and made meticulous adjustments. An airlines pilot grabbed them and raced to the airport.

The State Department official was wearing his new glasses down in the Bahamas by the time the sun set. His name was John Foster Dulles.

Med Students Liable For Military Duty

CHICAGO—Military service hands like a sword over the lives of students enrolled in the country's 76 approved four-year medical schools.

A recent survey by the American Medical Association disclosed that 81.5 per cent of all male students enrolled in medical schools during the 1955-56 academic year were subject to military liability. The number cited as liable for service makes no allowance for physical disabilities and other factors that would render an unknown percentage ineligible for service.

LONDON—The House of Lords has decided to give its members 4 minutes instead of 3 to reach the voting lobbies whenever legislation is voted on. "Many of us are getting older," one spokesman commented.

Nation Still Leans On Coal Industry For Power Sources

University Park, Pa.—In spite of recent developments in atomic and solar energy, the coal industry must look forward to a steadily increasing growth to meet our country's needs for industrial and domestic uses.

This is the opinion of Dr. H. Beecher Charmbury, professor of mineral preparation at the Pennsylvania State University, who predicts the constant rise in population and the sharp expansion of our public demand for greater conveniences will continue to supply the impetus for progress in the coal industry.

"When we add to the coal needed for industrial and domestic uses the energy that will be required in the not too distant future to supplement our oil and gas supplies and the coal that will soon be increasingly used for coal chemicals, the long term prospect for the coal industry is good indeed," Dr. Charmbury says.

However, if the coal industry is going to make the progress it must make, it must have help. He cites the need for more technically trained engineers for the efficient production, preparation, and utilization of coal.

Dr. Charmbury also cites the need for more research, not only in the utilization of coal, but also in the field of mining and in preparation.

He points out that in Pennsylvania, where coal is a billion dollar business and more than 75,000 persons are employed in just the mining of it, research is needed to determine more economical methods of extracting the coal.

New Disease Like Scarlet Fever

CHICAGO—An apparently new disease with symptoms resembling those of scarlet fever, but without its seriousness, was reported by a Pennsylvania pediatrician.

Thirty cases were seen at the State Hospital for Crippled Children at Elizabethtown, Pa., according to Dr. Mary D. Ames.

The scarlet fever-like symptoms were fever, sour throat, and a generalized bright red rash. However, no streptococci, the causative agent of scarlet fever, were isolated from the throats of the patients and there was no scaling of the skin as in scarlet fever.

Dr. Ames pointed out that it is very important to distinguish between the new disease and scarlet fever because of the hardships that would follow wrong diagnosis. A diagnosis of scarlet fever means that the patient must be quarantined for at least seven days. In Pennsylvania, other persons residing on the premises cannot handle or sell food, milk, candy, beverages or tobacco. The child loses time at school and the adults may be cut off from necessary income, she said.

More Americans Take To Wheeled Housing

The steadily growing trend to life on wheels (mobile homes) has made this industry a booming billion-dollar business, with nearly 200 manufacturers and 3500 dealers.

Sales of the wheeled houses have rocketed from a little over $1,000,000 in 1930 to approximately $500,000,000 last year, according to figures released at the 20th annual National Mobile Home Show in the New York Coliseum.

Another $500,000,000 is invested in mobile home parks, some of which cost as much as $500,000—each.

Mobile home occupants now number 3,000,000, with another quarter of a million people joining their ranks every year.

There are more than 1,000,000 of the wheeled houses in use today. Average annual income per family exceeds the national average by more than $1,000.

Chinese Reds Invent American Staplers

NEW YORK—The Red Chinese, while disavowing most of the philosophies of our free enterprise system, are not a bit hesitant about borrowing its more concrete benefits.

Latest thing to come out of a China that's force-feeding itself industrialization is a stapling machine for the use of the thousands of bureaucrats the communist system requires. It's hailed as an all-Chinese step forward, but even a casual examination proved it to be a copy of the familiar device produced by a Long Island firm.

New Steel Stamp

WASHINGTON—The Post Office Department will issue a centennial postage stamp in May commemorating the start of the "Age of Steel" in this country.

The "first day" of the new issue is to be timed to coincide with the Sixty-fifth General meeting of the members of American Iron and Steel Institute.

By Mrs. J. R. Lawson

Aboarding a Piedmont Plane at Preston-Glenn Airport Friday morning will be a quaint little lady, low in stature, with a natural wave in her gray hair and a twinkle in her eyes in anticipation of her trip to Cusamonga, California; namely, Mrs. E. L. Woodson who is now in her 96th year. Mrs. Woodson will be accompanied by the Air Port by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. (Jack) Martin, whom she has been visiting here frequently for a number of years while making her home with a son, Freddie Woodson in DeLand, Florida. She is Mrs. Martin's aunt by marriage.

Mrs. Woodson, a native of Prince Edward County, was the former Miss Emma Lee Jones, daughter of First Sergeant Nathaniel Gray Jones and Mrs. Jones. She was two years old at the time of the Surrender in 1865. She is remarkedly active and mentally alert, and relates interesting incidents of her childhood and at the same time makes comparisons of "Then and Now."

In her own words, she tells this story:

"When I was a baby, lying on the floor on a pillow, four Yankee soldiers came by our home. One of them asked my mother how old I was and she told them. Then he asked my name and my mother proudly told him, Emma Lee, named for the General. The soldier cursed and said they killed all babies named after Lee. At that time my Aunt Lou rushed in from the kitchen and said my name was Emma Lecola, which quick thinking on her part saved my life."

Mrs. Woodson proudly tells that her late father, First Sgt. Jones, was ordered by General Robert E. Lee to stand up on the buggy and "call out and tell the soldiers I have surrendered."

She said: "My father was an undertaker. While he was delivering a coffin one afternoon, a customer came in and wanted a coffin. I asked if he brought the measurements with him and he said he did. I cut the lumber by the measurements, made the coffin and stained it, made the delivery and collected the $3.00 before my father returned."

Mrs. Woodson recalls traveling from Prince Edward County to Appomattox in a wagon with her family to witness the Dedication of the New Court House here.

She is the mother of three children and one adopted son. Now living is her son in Florida and her adopted son, Leroy Woodson, of Baltimore. Md. Her late husband was a carpenter and "he could raise a house as good as anybody," said Mrs. Woodson.

For a number of years, Mrs. Woodson was a practical nurse, having nursed in every hospital in Richmond. When asked how many times she has been a patient in a hospital, she said, "Only two times, only a few minor operations, and my whole life." Dr. Johns Hopkins, in Baltimore.

She is a great lover of God's Book. She carries a small Testament in her pocket and long with it a magnifying glass, whenever she wants to read the Scripture. Her Scripture reading and read the Bible three times and has in her possession prizes she has won in Bible. She became a member of Hampden - Sydney Church at the age of 17 and who was pastor at the time performed her wedding.

Mrs. Woodson was married when asked what was the secret gram was she said, "Trust in God, and keep Him first in your heart." Answering an Andy, of course, she admitted she enjoyed the TV but thought the Lawrence Welk little too rough.

She definitely loves to dance and has been known to cut a few steps in her younger days, wearing "those long dresses" from floor to ceiling. Some of them are "flowered" and some are "striped."

When asked what she thought was the secret of her longevity of life, she replied, "God has something for me to do here and I know not what it is, but I am ready and waiting to do it. This will be the second flight. She left Appomattox by bus at 8:45 Friday morning for Washington and arrive in California at 6 o'clock the same day. She plans to make her home with her granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Quenberry. She says she has about 40 pounds of luggage and "I'll be glad to get near enough to California to pick up some of my clothes from them."

When asked when she plans to return to Virginia, she replied that she would be brought back for burial in Richmond and that all necessary arrangements for her funeral with a funeral Home, and has provided for the burial of her own.

I liked this one:

A lady with a pain in her side went to see a physician. He told her she had appendicitis and must have an operation. She disliked this diagnosis so she went to another doctor. He told her she had gall bladder trouble and must have an operation. "Where do you go from here?" inquired a friend.

"Back to the first," she declared. "I'd rather have appendicitis."
